"THE CRIME OF '73"

Received an Airing at the Sixth Ward Meeting Last Night...

ARNETT AND PENDLETON SPOKE

So Did Mesers, Dryden and Hiley, and the Gist of Their Remarks was Relating to that "Terrible, Terrible Crime"-Col. Arnett Sava Some Nice Things About Illi Opponent, and then Tells why Times Are Bard Not a Word Concerning the Tariff or the Wilson Bill.

Dan O'Brien's meeting in the Sixth ward last night was the opening of the campaign on the Popocratte side in that district, and it attracted a very good crowd of people all of whom kept remarkably good order, considering that it was an out door meeting. The speaking took place from a platform erected at the base of the pole raised by Mi. Or-Brien and his friends some weeks ago, and was participated in by Messre, Dry-den, Riley, Pendleton and Col. W. W. Arnett.
On the platform were seated a large

Arnett.
On the platform were scated a large number of the faithful Populists and free silverites, among whom were noticed George W. Robinson, Beverly Eoff, Jim Fitzsimmons, Billy Steager, John Shriver, Dr. A. F. Gasmire, Samuel Hattman, Mike Stein, of Fulton, Charley Steahons, Noah Zane, Dr. Thomas E. Steahons, Noah Zane, Dr. Thomas E.

Hartman, Mike Stein, of Fulton, Charley Stephens, Noah Zane, Dr. Thomas E. Lunsford, John A. White, W. P. Roblinson, W. W. Irwin, Joseph Voight, Dan O'Brien and others.

At 8 o'clock Mr. Joseph Voight called the meeting to order and introduced the first speaker, M. P. Dryden. None of the other speakers had arrived up to this time and it was necessary for Mr. Dryden tokep up his whirlwindof pointless oratory for some that. U was with apparent relief that he noticed sy Congressman John O. Pendieton advancing, and he lost no time in winding up his talk.

gressman John O. Pendleton advancing, and he lost no time in winding up his talk.

To fill in the time, it was suggested that Mr. Pendleton address the crowd, which he did with his usual grace and gestures. He began by explaining that this was his first appearance on any stage in the garb of a stump speaker for four long years, and that he was once more glad to greet the 'bardy thatel sons of toil" and tell them just what they needed to place them on an equality with the inillionaires of the country.

He said that the money of the country was unfairly and partially distributed, and that the Democratic party this year was going to lift the laboring man o his rightfui throne, right beside the robbing nd long the formal that the death of the arth to lift up the downtroden masses. He called attention to the fact that in 1850 there were not over two condred millionaires in the whole country, while to-day their are 30,000 of them and the population more than doubled. He called't understand why it is that so many men could set rich and so many have to stay poor and work for a living. "That is the problem of the hour," said the speaker, "and you men are now called upon to cast your votes whether you favor a charge in the existing policies or not, and I feel assured you will cast them right."

He's but at an Anarchiat.

Mr. Pendleton desired to impress upon them the fact that he was not an snarchist, but he didn't see why the people should create any more millianaires than they had all eady. He said that legislation in the past thirty years had been in favor of the rich man and that now Bryan was going to "make a change in business all around." He dwelt on the "crime of 1813" and said that thedemon-etration of silver was made in the dark and that Congressmen had voted for the bill who didn't know what they were voiing for, and it was a deep laid plot to make the rich richer and the poor poorer. Mr. Pendleton might have added that it was owing to "ignorance" of the matter that Senator Stewart voted for the "crime."

He said it was appalling the amount of English and European capital that has been invested in syndicates in this country and called attention to the assertion that most of the railronds were owned and controlled by English money. archist, but he didn't see why the peohas been invested in syndicates in this country and called attention to the assertion that most of the railroads were owned and controlled by English money, and nearly one-half of the herweries. "But," said the speaker, "the people by their votes for free silver in November will change this condition of affairs and the British lion will put its tail between its legs and will be glad to fly across the ocean."

Then he referred to Mr. Bryan's "crown of thoras" and "cross of spid," but the crowd didn't catch on to it as the speaker evidently expected it to, for he worked it up to the highest plich in his power and it fell that. He closed by saying that the Chicago nominees stood for honest policies and that the election of Bryan would be the first blow struck for the relief of time workingman in the last thirty years. By this admission it appears that John O. has come to the conclusion that the Wilson bill was not a blow struck in that direction.

At the conclusion of Mr. Pendioton's talk, Mayer's band very appropriately played, "When Johnnie Comes Marching Home."

Col. Arnett Talks.

The chairman introduced the next speaker as "the next congressman from speaker as "the next congressman from the grand old First district of West Vir-ginia," and Col. W. W. Arnett stepped forward, being greeted with a liberal round of applause.

The coionel began by saying he had forward, being greeted with a liberal round of applause.

The colonel began by saying he had the highest personal regard for his opponent and in fact, all the candidates on the Republican tleket, and credited them as being honest and trustworthy men in every particular, and said that his campaign would be made, on the issue before the people and not by personal abuse. He said the doctrine taken up by the Democratic party this year and made a feature of, was not a new one, and spoke of the platforms of taken up by the Democratic party this year and made a feature of, was not a new one, and spoke of the platforms of the platform of feature of the party declared in favor of a free and unlimited colonge of both gold and silver. He read from a text book, a section of the platform of 1888, in which the party favors honest money both in gold and silver. He read the platforms of other years, but it was noticeable that, none of them spoke of free colonge of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1 until that adopted by the Chicago convention last month.

He called attention to the fact that the country was laboring under a depression which has existed now for several years, and that there had been a /general suspension of industry all over the country. He said the working men wanted to know what was the mutter, and they, by their vores in November, would demand that the country has only had hard times since Cleveland and a Democratic tongress was elected, but as it is not the policy of the Democratic speakers to refer to Mr. Cleveland's administration or to the tariff this year, the crowd received no enlighterment on this score.

The speaker said that the policy suggested by Mr. Bryan had never been used in this country but it had in other countries and proved successful, and he neked the crowd to give the new idea a trial and see how it would work for a few years. He said that under the existing laws the working man was opporessed and that he was sure the new way would not make their conditions any words. el began by saying he had Gives It to the Bullers.

The colonel referred to the bolters by saying that he respected them and believed that they were conscientious in their convictions, but he desired to call their convictions, but he desired to call attention to the personality of the holters, and said that two-thirds of them were either bankers or interested in some way in the exchange of money. He said they were all rich men and they would naturally vote to protect their interests. He further said Lombard street in London, and Wall street in New York, were against free coinage the same as the bankers, and it was a campaign of the rich against the poor. He said that the statistics show that we have $24 per capita, but that he had figured it down and his figures gives only $12 or $13 per capita, about one-half of the figures given out by the treasure.

He said there was not enough gold in the world to pay the bonded indebt-edness and for this reason the country should coin silver enough to pay the national debt and increase the circulating currency. "The wealth of the world," said Col. Arnett, "is made from free raw material, and the vast quantities of coal in the earth and the timber on the earth furnish labor for men who must be paid for that labor, and there should be more money in circulation to pay the men for the labor they give in hewing the timber or mining of the coal. The colonel here had a splendid opportunity to come out favoring a restoration of the tariff on these commodities, but he failed to take advantage of it.

It was at this point that the colonel, following on the heels on Mr. Pendleton, took up the "crime of 73," and like that gentleman, characterized the participants as arch conspirators. He referred to how they had destroyed half of the lawful money of the country, but he failed to mention the mount of silver in circulation before "the crime" was enacted and compare it with the amount of silver in circulation to-day. He went back to the days of Rome and told how the demonetization of silver caused the overthrow of that mighty nation and treasury.

He said there was not enough gold the demonetization of silver caused the overthrow of that mighty nation and urged the people to think well before they voted to permit the United States to suffer like disaster. He cautioned them to leave the affairs of the government in the hands of the party that had never deceived them, the party that never failed to legislate in favor of "the masses against the classes." If they would do this he promised them that the currency would be increased as the population increased and that "hard times would never come no more."

population increased and that 'hard times would never come no more."

Mr. Riley Appears.

Attorney General Riley was present and was called upon to address the crowd. He said he would only say a word, and that was to urge the people to support the state ticket. To keep the administration of the state affairs in the hands of the party that has guarded it so well for twenty-five years. He evidently did not agree with Mr. Pendletton's kick on foreign ruilroad capital coming into the state, for he pointed with pride to the fact that in the past twenty-five years every county but three had been pierced by a ruilroad running through it.

Mr. Riley said that he desired to keep his voice for some future time, when he would be heard on all the issues of the day, therefore he would bring his speech to a close.

The applause throughout the meeting

The appliance throughout the meeting was very limited, and if it had not been for the gentlemen on the platform the speeches would none of them been received with any manifestations whatever. As it was the demonstration was very ordinary, and while the crowd was very creditable in size, it was by no means enthusiastic.

Mayer's band furnished some good music during the meeting which served to liven things up considerable.

A Ringing Call to the Old Guard to Or-gunize for the Campaign.
The well known and effective organization of four years ago is going to reoriganize next Thursday evening at 8 o'clock at Odd Fellows fail, corner of Twelfth and Chapline streets. In the last campaign this was perhaps the showlest child and attracted more attention than any in Wheeling, and strange to say, the uniform cost less than that of any other club. It was for the purpose of allowing anyone, no matter what his occupation and circumstances were, to become a member.

It is hoped that all voters, regardless of political creed, who are in favor of "sound money and protection," puddlers, bankers, merchants, coal miners, and all other wage workers and business men, will attend and join in the reorganization next Thursday evening. organize next Thursday evening at !

they will be buried by the county this afternoon.

A letter from Chef of Police Heaton, of Parkersburg, says he don't know the man, but that he had found that E. B. Buckley, who was said to be a relative, lived a few miles from Parkersburg, but was not at home when he called and the family did not know when he would be. The coroner also received a letter from Mr. W. F. Poc, of Parkersburg, who said he knew the old man to be a preacher, and that he had always registered at the hotels as coming from Spencer, W. Va.

Charged with Trespass.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Aug. 17.—

There are about 136 persons staying at the botel, and the most of these were thrown into a condition bordering on panie on being awakened by the bound of the explosion that wrecked the hotel safe. Some guests started down stairs, but as the robbers were in the dark and they in the light a threat of the robbers to shoot kept them in the back until the cracksmen had escaped. Afterwards the night watchman was found lying in a stuper, which was evidently caused by chloroform, and with his hands securely tied. He remained unconscious for several hours.
